副題	Comparative Regionalism
授業概要	This course examines regional cooperation and integration schemes around the world. It introduces a comparative perspective to analyze the regional dynamics of inter-state cooperation and integration. The course is divided into three parts: (i) region as an analytical unit, (ii) region-based analytical approaches, and (iii) regional cooperation and integration around the world. The first part of the course is lecture-based. Students are introduced to different arguments on region and regionalism beyond disciplinary boundaries. The second part follows a seminar format. Pre-assigned reading materials are distributed in advance of the class. Depending on the theme of the week, class discussion focuses on some of the most salient issues with regard to the ideational, economic, political, security, institutional, global dimensions of regionalism. The third part of the course is based on student presentations. It covers a variety of regional cooperative and integration schemes around the world. Depending on the number of the participants, students are required to do (group) presentations on the evolutionary trajectory of regionalism in a particular region. Towards the end of the term, students are required to write a term essay that employs region as an analytical unit. A special guidance on term essays is provided. In principal, this course will be conducted face-to-face.
授業の到達目標	This course aims to help students develop a sophisticated analytical perspective based on region and regionalism in their own research projects.
事前・事後学習の内容	In the first half of the course, the students will be required to work on the assigned reading materials before the class. In the second half of the course, the class will be divided into small groups to prepare for class presentations on regionalism around the world. It is expected that each student spends approximately 120 minutes before and after each week's class.
